

ILLUSIONS OF ADULTING

by Sara Zimmerman

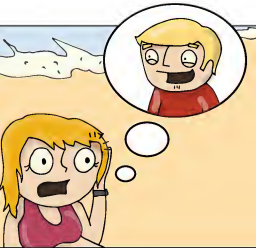

Come for the comics,
stay for the comments...

You were floating unconscious in the water. I rescued you.

Err... thanks...

Uh... I have a boyfriend... well, I think...

...I mean,
I haven't seen him
for a bit... but...
I think he'll be back...

Uhhhh... sooo....

A white speech bubble with a black outline and a pointed tail at the top, set against a solid teal background. The bubble contains the text "...I gotta go to work!".

...I gotta go to work!

Wait, but...

Steve, it's me again.
Where are you?
I'm heading to work...
please call me back.

LATER, AT WORK:

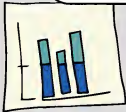

Hi guys.
Ready for my presentation?

Stupid surfer girl is so unprofessional, showing up with wet hair and a giant lump on her head. This should be a joke.

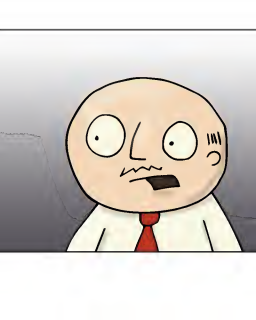

...so you see, our last PR campaign had an incredible return on investment with conversions from all social media channels...

Well done, Hailey.
I'm impressed. You're quite an asset to our company.

by Sara Zimmerman / Unearthed Comics

Here's a comment I would like to highlight from my "Illusions Of Adulthood Comment Army":

"Whatever you say about this comic, I absolutely am thankful for it! It has motivated me to be a better person! I recently (became an) adult, and I am gonna try my best to not be anything like this deplorable, stupid, selfish, disillusioned Hailey. (No offense to the author, I still love Unearthed Comics!)"